THE ROSE.

[Sara Teasdale, in Scribner's Magazine.]

Beneath my casement window
Pierrot was singing, singing;
I heard his lute the whole night thro'
Until the east was red.
Alas, alas, Pierrot,
I had no rose for flinging
Save one that drunk my tears for dew
Before its leaves were dead.

I found it in the darkness,
I kissed it once and threw it,
The petals scattered over him,
His song was turned to joy;
And he will never know
(Alas, the one who knew it)
The rose was plucked when dusk was dim
Beside a laughing boy.

OSTEND NOT SO LIVELY.

German Military Occupation Changes Normal Life of Inhabitants.

The normal life of the usually lively city of Ostend has been radically changed by the German military occupation. Inhabitants are forbidden to leave their houses between 7 o'clock in the evening and 7 o'clock in the morning, and no lights may be shown during that time. No one can leave town without passports from the German authorities.

The usual market gatherings are almost suspended. Villagers from outside Ostend can come in only when attended by their burgomasters, and the market hours are limited to Monday and Thursday mornings. All horses have been taken by the military authorities, so only dog carts can be used to bring food into the town. Butter, eggs, meat and vegetables are cheap, but Ostend is without fish, because all fishermen have fled to England. Fishing would be impossible, because civilians are forbidden to approach the coast, and the inhabitants of houses along the seashore have been expelled.

The railways and electric trams have been stopped for everything except military purposes, and are being used night and day for sending provisions to the front and bringing back wounded.

Ostend is without newspapers, soap, oil, candles and coffee. The Germans have made heavy requisitions, not only of foodstuffs in large quantities, but of cigars and wine, and all available mattresses and covers, as well as clothing, linen, wire and bicycles. For the property taken the Germans have given requisition notes amounting to $1,000,000. The hotels are occupied by German officers, who live on the best of everything.

German bands play in the parks every day, but have only the Germans as auditors, because the inhabitants who are left boycott them.

THE DOG THAT WORKS.

[Outing.]

The first thing the successful handlers of working dogs must learn is that no two dogs are alike. Each animal has an individuality as great as that of the average human being. In some instances it is more pronounced, and, as the wolf strain or pure breeding increases, the individual characteristics of the dog become greater and more diverse.

The man who can't control himself under what will often be trying circumstances won't be able to control a dog team and get the best work out of it. The only job anything like dog driving is managing a grand opera company. For dogs do have temperament, and often more will be accomplished by humoring them for the time than by whipping.

PERSONALS.

....The seventieth birthday of Queen Alexandra of England was celebrated Tuesday. She objects to the title "Queen Mother," though it is very generally applied to her both at home and abroad. Born at Copenhagen December 1, 1844, she was the eldest daughter of King Christian IX of Denmark, who died eight years ago. She was married in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, to the then Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII, March 10, 1863. The present king was born June 3, 1865. King Edward, who ascended the throne in 1901, died in 1910.

....General von Hindenburg, who inflicted a disastrous defeat on the Russian troops in East Prussia, has been honored by the University of Koenigsberg with a quadruple doctor's degree, all four faculties of law, divinity, medicine and philosophy having united to do him honor. His diploma bears the following inscription: "To the supreme leader of the Eighth German army, who completely overthrew and destroyed the Russian hordes, and in this way defended his native province and German culture from barbarian enemies to the immortal ornament of the Fatherland."

BOOK BY RALPH CONNOR.

A new book by Ralph Connor will be welcomed by his many readers. The scenes are laid in the Canadian wilds and the story has to do with an Indian rebellion and how it was met by the Northwest Mounted Police. "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail" is really a sequel to "Corporal Cameron," but if one has missed reading the earlier book it will not detract from the interest in the second story. Several characters appear in both, including Cameron, the hero; Mandy, his wife; Moira, his sister; Dr. Martin, an able physician, and Raven, the outlaw.

The tale centres about the rising and quelling of an Indian insurrection. The opening chapters are full of sinister rumors and forebodings of what such an uprising would mean to the white settlers. The only defense are a few under-manned forts and a mere handful of the Northwest Mounted Police. Out of these facts Mr. Connor weaves a stirring story of courage and devotion, of love and misunderstandings, of Indian wiles and practices, of the fortitude and high bearing of the police encountering tremendous odds. The author cannot say too much in praise of the police patrols, who went in and out among the Indian camps in face of great danger. Of them he asserts: "To these guardians of empire who fought no fight, who endured no siege, who witnessed no massacre, the Dominion and the empire owe more than none but the most observing will ever know."

Sergeant Cameron patrols the Sun Dance trail in order to capture one Copperhead, a wily and healthy Indian chief, who is inciting the tribes to rise against the government. His experiences are thrilling, and he has several narrow escapes, and so does Copperhead. The customs of the Indians, their pow-wows, their excitable conduct when crazed with whiskey, their gratitude for kindness shown them, never forgetting a favor, are all portrayed as the story develops.

GERMANY'S ENORMOUS LEVY ON BELGIUM.

It is stated that the German governor of the province of Brabant, in which Brussels is located, convoked a meeting of financiers and told them that Belgium must pay 35,000,000 francs ($7,000,000) monthly for the maintenance of German troops. In addition to this sum, it is said, Belgium must contribute a war levy of 375,000,000 francs ($75,000,0000) as a penalty for violations of neutrality by Belgium and losses ensuing therefrom to Germany.

RE-ORGANIZATION IN SIGHT.

With the favorable vote of the taxpayers for re-organization, Newport takes a long step in bringing its fire department to a state of modern efficiency. The result is especially gratifying to those who for a long time have believed the department has not been what it should be, and the radical change now authorized will bring it to a standard which will make it efficient in apparatus and equipment, commensurate with the demands of the time. Not every thing can be done at once, but a beginning can be made which will assure complete re-organization within a year, and Newport will undoubtedly be glad it has made the change.

The favorable vote in certain parts of the city is a great surprise to the most ardent supporters of the re-organization, and the large plurality in its favor shows hearty endorsement and appreciation of the labors of the committee which made its investigations so thoroughly and brought out a plan which means so much to the city's welfare.

A STATE BOARD OF INSANITY.

Some of the physicians of Providence are starting a movement for the establishment of a state board of insanity, the object being the separation of the management of the insane hospital from the other state institutions. The reason is not made very clear, except in a general way that it is the belief that the welfare of the institution and of its inmates would be better served by a management of its own, free from the others of the group, which are all of a penal or corrective character.

It is proposed that the legislature, if it will, shall pass a measure carrying out the idea thus advanced, giving the charge of the insane hospital to a separate board of managers. It has not been definitely so stated as yet, but the presumption is that the medical men desire this board to consist largely if not wholly of physicians. These, it may be supposed, they believe more competent to care for these wards of the state than a board of laymen, as the charge of the inmates of the insane hospital is really medical work rather than of the kind embodied in the care of those in the penal institutions.

The plan has much to commend it. There is truth in the assumption that the work of caring for the inmates of the insane hospital is medical rather than corrective, and consequently should be in the charge of medical men. This is already the case so far as the direct charge is concerned, as a physician is at the head of the institution and is surrounded by a staff of men of that profession, but it would be proper that this should extend further and include the management as well as the direct charge. It is conceivable that in the regulation of the hospital there might be some conflict of authority between a board composed of laymen in charge of the general management and a staff of officers composed of doctors in direct care of the patients. That there has been any such disagreement is not charged, but the possibilities are inherent in such a condition and it is not unlikely that some confusion of government or duties has arisen which has led to this action on the part of physicians.

At present the care of the insane hospital rests with the Board of State Charities and Corrections and it is easy to understand that the work which that body has to do in this connection is quite different from that in connection with the other institutions, penal in their character. The Board is composed of laymen who serve without compensation, and it should be definitely understood in any advocacy of the change in management proposed that if a state board of insanity is created the members shall serve without remuneration. If this is done there will probably be little real opposition to the movement, for the general opinion probably will be that the contention of the doctors is sound; that the management of the insane hospital should be separate from that of the penal institutions, and that the board of government should be composed largely or wholly of physicians. If it should be proposed that the new board which it is desired to create shall receive compensation for its services there would be ground for opposition on the general point that there are already too many paid boards doing state work and the number should be decreased instead of increased.

This is the contention made some weeks ago by the News, and supported by facts and figures taken from the reports of officials. These showed that the state has more of these commissions receiving large remuneration from the treasury than the conditions warrant, that the habit of creating such boards has gone too far and that there is serious need of stopping this practice and even of abolishing some of the commissions already in existence. It would be unwise for the legislature to agree to the establishment of any new board of government at this time, and unwise for physicians or any others to advocate such a movement. It is probable, however, that this proposition does not include the creation of a board of insanity which shall receive compensation from the state, but that the members shall serve without pay, for the benefit of the state and the patients at this hospital. With such an understanding the plan deserves commendation and support.

NEUTRAL TERRITORY.

Whether the article on neutral countries published in the Vossische Zeitung was intended as a belated justification of the invasion of Belgium, or an advance warning to Switzerland of a coming invasion, its propositions are entirely impracticable. Swiss papers regard it as a threat to their country. We doubt very much if Germany intends to violate the neutrality of another country, but at all events the world will not, and cannot, assent to the propositions of the German newspaper.

The Vossische Zeitung explains that Germany "adopts a line of neutrality not to entail the necessity for a state to take up arms against a belligerent which wishes to cross its territory. On the contrary, a neutral state should only of resort to arms in the event of either belligerent endeavoring to treat it or its territory as a vassal or conquered state." The impracticability of this is worth considering in view of the fact that some persons imagine that all would have gone well with Belgium if it had not resisted Germany, and denounce England for inducing Belgium to resist. If the Germans entered Belgium, the French would have met them there, whether the Belgians offered resistance to Germany or not. Germany's invasion made Belgium the battle ground, whatever it might do. No one can suppose that if Germany entered Belgium France would wait inside its own lines for the attack.

If Germany with half a million men in Belgium had attempted to "treat it or its territory as a vassal or conquered state," what could the Belgians have done about it then? Any chance of effective resistance would have disappeared by the time the German armies had over-run the country. If, as has been suggested, Germany should land an army in Boston for the invasion of Canada there would be no use of reconciling Americans to the invasion by distributing copies of the Vossische Zeitung with its treatise on neutral countries as the footballs or adjuncts of belligerent nations. New England would be a battlefield, even if it offered no resistance; if Germany or England annexed it, resistance would be too late.

DELAY IN COUNTING THE BALLOTS.

On the night of election day, when all is done but the counting of the ballots, people are impatient to learn the results at the earliest moment. The News has urged for years that the wardens in the several voting districts arrange the order of counting so that the result in the case of a particular candidate at large, or the fate of any question, may be known quickly. Tuesday night every one was anxious to know the result of the voting for mayor and on the fire department question, but was compelled to wait while the officers in the Fourth ward counted the ballots on the full ticket, including school committee, aldermen and the numerous candidates for the Representative Council from that particular ward.

The London papers pay high tribute to the late Admiral Mahan, many of them attributing to him the honor of being largely responsible for making Great Britain realize the necessity of maintaining her naval supremacy. This is an unusual honor for the Britishers to pay to an American or any other not a native of the country. Admiral Mahan was recognized the world over as a man of the highest achievements.

Postmaster Burlingame will go into the mayor's office with the satisfaction of knowing that he has the support of a very large part of his fellow-citizens in any reforms which he may undertake. The News wishes him success in his new official duties. Mayor Boyle has suffered the pangs of defeat before, as well as the joys of success, and undoubtedly takes the present overthrow as one of the possibilities of political life.

There are many good features in the election returns, but the failure of voters to retain the service of Miss Hunter for the public schools is not one of them. Aside from the advantage generally recognized in having a woman on such boards, Miss Hunter had given such intelligent and devoted service to the work assigned to her that to make her defeat for re-election a distinct loss to public interest.

Of the eight cities in Massachusetts who voted on the license question Tuesday, only one changed its mind. Northampton went from license to no license. Quincy and Waltham voted "No," as they did a year ago.

The Daily News takes special satisfaction in the large vote in favor of the re-organization of the fire department along modern lines, a matter which the paper has consistently advocated.

Boys of Newport and Ashley of New Bedford are together in defeat, as they have been together so many times in victory. Both perennial mayors lost out this year.

Of the 5,439 voters whose names were on the list, the returns show that but 4,559 performed the civic duty of casting their ballots. Where were the 1,180?

LEARNING TO SPELL.

Boston Tackling the Task of Improving Teaching in Its Public Schools.

[Boston Transcript.]

In common with all large cities, Boston contains many citizens who are just "old-fashioned" enough to cling to the notion that the really educated boy or girl should know how to spell. Not infrequently these men, as leaders in the business world, are large employers of youth, and are not slow about insisting that their ideas shall receive attention. As a result of their protesting interest, Boston is now tackling the task of improving the teaching of spelling in its public schools. As yet this effort is still in the "inquiry" stage, but already some sort of remedy is in sight. The new department of educational investigation and measurement, in its first report, finds that the principal problem is to determine what words children should be taught to learn. It is admitted, candidly, that "our spelling material for the various grades is not well selected, that the pupils mis-spell over and over the most common words and that there is need of concentrating instruction in the common words of the child's writing vocabulary."

Plainly, then, we are about to take a step in the right direction. The spelling book of the past is to be discarded. A book whose 1500 words made it useful enough in the days when education was the simple matter of the three R's but valueless in an era when the cry is for the specialist and when a man has time to learn only what he really needs to learn. In its place is to be put a book of some 2,000 words, that number having been found to comprise a suitable vocabulary for the average eighth grade pupil. The boy and girl of the future is to be taught to spell not every word in the language but every word which he is likely to make use of.

The utilitarian features of the scheme will not appeal to everybody but for the present at least no other scheme seems feasible. Resurrect the old-time spelling bee as an instrument of education, as the best way to learn to do it by doing, so quite often the best way to learn to spell is by spelling.

A HIGH MORAL LESSON.

Death Overtakes Reservists in the Positions Where They Had Fought.

[French Officer, in Paris Figaro.]

"Yesterday I was able to escape for a few minutes. The bombardment since October 1 has ceased completely. Our infantry is mistress of ——, and the enemy's artillery no longer fires upon the village. It is quite uselessly scarred. The pieces of our artillery stationed in the rear of the crest B—— B——, our artillerymen have prepared themselves remarkably well. They have built shelters and suffered but little from the German fire.

"I profited by a few hours of liberty to visit the battlefield near the woods of ——, to the east of B——. I saw there the most moving spectacle of my life. The dead are no longer counted. One finds there these were corpses in section, and a moral lesson which this spectacle taught. I have sent my officers on a pilgrimage there. Treasures of energy had been extinguished. There were more than 600 where they had fought in the positions, where death had caught them: one section in the course of a bayonet charge, one section on its knees, firing; in front, around the officers in their places, every officer or man with his back to the foe. They were reservists. There were some parts of the line where the regularity of the intervals (a foot between the corpses was impressive.

"Passing next to the German side, I was able to observe the effects of our 75-millimetre guns. Men intrenched in dress shelters were torn to pieces. A little to the rear, in the woods, were long rows of dead. They had been killed by our infantry. In one place six or seven had crawled to one another's side to die together. One of them still held in his hand this postal card, which I now send, and which I intend to send on to the French family at the end of the war, that they may know their son died like a Christian. It will be a little consolation for this unhappy family.

"A little farther on another group of eight had united in death. Between them was a little prayerbook opened at the prayer of the dying. Each German soldier carries one of these little books, containing several prayers specially appropriate to the [illegible]

NO DANGER IN MEAT.

Thorough Cooking Renders Uninspected Beef Safe; Quarantine Protection.

According to the specialists of the Department of Agriculture people even in states quarantined for the foot and mouth disease need have no fear of eating meat, provided they cook it thoroughly. The foot and mouth disease is not easily communicated to human beings through food, although milk from a diseased cow might transmit the disease to a human being. In the case of milk however, pasteurization will render it entirely safe. Human beings, who do get the disease, commonly get it from direct contact with a sick animal. It is wisest, therefore, for people to keep away from all animals having the disease, unless they are properly provided with rubber gloves, coats and boots, and these are thoroughly disinfected after each visit to the animals.

In the case of meat, as in the case of milk, it must be remembered that all herds which actually show the disease are quarantined, and neither milk nor meat from the sick animals can be sold. 60 per cent of the meat used in this country is produced in the nearly 900 federally inspected slaughtering and packing establishments located in 240 cities. In these establishments no animal is slaughtered until it has passed an ante-mortem inspection and also a most rigid post-mortem inspection by a veterinarian at time of slaughter. After slaughter its meat cannot leave the establishment until it has been carefully examined and stamped "U. S. Inspected and Passed." In all these establishments no animal showing any symptoms whatever of foot and mouth disease is allowed to go to slaughter, and no meat which, on post-mortem inspection, shows any suspicious symptoms of this complaint can be shipped out of the establishment. All meat suspected of coming from an animal suffering with this complaint is sent, under federal seal, to the tanks to be rendered into fertilizer. The federal inspection stamp on meat, therefore, means that it is entirely safe.

The federal government, however, has no jurisdiction over local slaughter houses which do not ship meat outside the state in which it is slaughtered. If, however, meat from such an animal did escape from one of these local slaughter houses, which are purely under state or municipal control all danger of its communicating the disease to human beings would be removed when it is thoroughly cooked and sterilized. Those who are located near an infected region and wish to be absolutely certain of the safety of their meat should cook it thoroughly.

The disease when contracted by adults is not at all a serious illness. It commonly takes the form of slight fever sores in the mouth and a slight eruption on the fingers. In the case of small or sickly children it may take a more serious form, especially if complicated with other illnesses.

DEMAND FOR SPECIAL TAX STAMP.

The demand for stamps for the special taxes imposed by the new war revenue has been so great that the stamp division of the internal revenue bureau and its adjunct, the bureau of engraving and printing, have been working day and night keeping up with the appeal from all sections of the country. More than 500,000,000 stamps have been issued by the government under the terms of the new law.

MIDDLETOWN.

Methodist Woman's Foreign Missionary Society's Monthly Meeting.

[Regular correspondence of the News.]

The December meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held Tuesday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal Church, the president, Mrs. Fred Smith, in the chair. Plans were made for the purchase of dolls, which will be dressed by the members for the missionary box to be sent to India. A committee was appointed, with the president as chairman, for the distribution of mite boxes.

The year's study, "The Child in the Midst," was commenced, the topic for the afternoon being "The Child in Its Helplessness." An interesting letter was read from Miss Edith A. Hemingway, a New England missionary at Singapore, with whom one of the members has been in correspondence for eight years.

The Athletic Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church held its weekly meeting Tuesday evening, several new members being received. The members now have their suits, the jerseys being blue and white. A basket ball team from this organization will play the Newport Young Men's Christian Association team Friday evening.

Miss M. May Ward has returned to Pratt Institute, Brooklyn.

Dandelions continue in bloom.

Miss Jennie Koehler of the extension department of Kingston College will commence her study courses in Middletown Thursday, with an afternoon devoted to the re-making of furs. Mrs. William C. Hubbell will act as hostess.

The turkey supper to be given by St. Columba Guild will be in charge of Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. Lyman C. Josephs and Miss Henshaw.

FIGHTING TO A FINISH.

Combatants in This War Will Not Yield Until the Last Moment.

[Rochester Post-Express.]

England knows and France and Germany know that this war will leave the nations which are vanquished as impoverished as Belgium is—ravaged and ruined beyond immediate repair. Half their national wealth, if need be, is therefore a small price to pay in order to preserve the rest and their liberties to boot. Sacrifice half or lose all are the awful alternatives confronting the powers engaged, hence it is not to be wondered that the nations are pouring out their blood and treasure without stint.

There is no umpire to enforce the rules in this fight. There are no neutral powers strong enough to impose restraint upon the victors or secure fairer terms for the vanquished. There is no outsider to step in at the critical moment and demand of either side, under threat of taking the field against them, that peace shall be concluded or even that atrocities must cease. There is no arbiter able to enforce his suggestions, no public opinion which the combatants are bound to respect. In the justice of the victors lies the only hope the vanquished have. The longer the war lasts, the more it costs the winners and the bitterer the hatred grows the less of consideration can the defeated expect. They will therefore bleed themselves white before they yield. They will make use of every means.

Mercy may seem to bid the world farewell, and the only two neutrals vast in population, America and China, may hear with horror as the conflict goes on that one side hard pressed for food is shooting its prisoners as fast as they are taken and that the other side has threatened or commenced reprisals. Other wars have been sparring matches before a civilized audience or fights to a finish under rules. This war may prove to be more like a brute fight, a battle between a wild cat and a wolf. Such combats are not fought to a draw, but to a decisive result. We may hope that these dark forebodings will prove to be unfounded, but there is less than could be wished just now to make it certain that they are.

Do You Ever Think
When making a purchase, of the standing location, rating, facilities, etc., of the house you are doing business with?
A good credit rating stands for ability to purchase cheaply. A location somewhat out of the regular run of trade makes for a cheaper rent. A fireproof building admits of lower insurance premiums. A thoroughly modern equipment enables its owner to do business economically. A well established trade and a reputation for quality goods are business assets.

CROWD EAGER FOR RETURNS.

Results Practically Certain Early, But Large Number Stayed Through.

The vote in the city Tuesday, which appeared in certain localities to be coming out slowly up to early afternoon, was more rapid when the workers had time to look over the lists more carefully and send the "hustlers" out to bring in those who were late. Those who were employed during the day came in after working hours and the Torpedo Station men added to the rush of the last two hours. When the totals were counted up, after the polls had closed, it was seen that there had been nothing slow about the voting—and that only a few who could come out did not go to the polls.

After 6:30, when the polls closed, there was nothing to do for about half an hour except study the total vote figures. At 6:56 the first returns came in, from the large district in the First ward, for mayor only, and these showed a net gain for Burlingame over Boyle of 37. This indicated the election of Burlingame if he should maintain his gain throughout the entire city.

At 7:09 ten full returns from the smaler district in the Fifth ward came in, and these showed that Burlingame had made a gain in that district. Three minutes later the smaller district of the Third ward indicated a similar tendency and with these three precincts in Burlingame had made a net gain of 59, towards overcoming Boyle's plurality of 93 in 1913. At this time the prediction was made that Burlingame would win by 100 or more plurality, and the Daily News announced, in response to calls over the telephone, that Burlingame was undoubtedly elected. These predictions were soon verified, as subsequent gains soon wiped out the 93 plurality, and were increased with each return from the voting districts.

The first full return reached the News office at 7:23, from the two small districts in the Second ward. The small districts in the Fifth and First followed very closely. Then the full return on the general ticket from the large districts came in rapid succession from the Fifth, Third, First and Second.

At 9:30 the vote for mayor, School Committee, aldermen and the fire department proposition was all in from all the wards except the Fourth. At that time there was no doubt about the mayor, the members-elect of the board of aldermen were practically determined, and there was little question as to the success of the fire department proposition. The School Committee, however, was much in doubt. The election of Dr. Darrah and Mr. Harvey was assured, but it was difficult to tell which two of the other four candidates had been successful.

Many, however, waited for the full returns—and they waited long. There were fears that the messenger sent to bring the returns had been lost, and others were dispatched to find him or learn why he was delayed. The reason for the delay was soon discovered. The warden in that ward, as in other years, had decided to count the votes cast for all the candidates on the full ballots at one time, and it was a long and tedious job checking up the marks on 800 ballots.

It was thus fully two hours after the other wards had come in that the Fourth ward returns were made up. It was 12:30 when the vote for mayor was given out—not by the warden, however—and 15 minutes later still when the full returns reached the News office. There was little delay in making up the figures and bulletining the results, with the total votes and pluralities for the successful candidates.

It was, however, later still when the result of the balloting for Representative Council in the Second and Fifth wards was known, and at that time few were waiting to learn the results. There was an unusually large crowd in the early evening inside or in front of the News office, and a good number remained until long after midnight, although there was little doubt then of the results except as regards the School Committee and the Representative Council in the Second, Fourth and Fifth wards. Even at 1 o'clock a considerable number were reading the bulletins.

There was much interest in the result on the fire department proposition, but early returns showed a decisive vote in its favor, except in the smaller district in the Fifth ward, every other showing a plurality for it. As the returns came in from the larger precincts it was seen that, even in localities where the opposition was thought to be strong, the voters had come out in favor of the change. With only the Fourth to hear from, there was a plurality of 466 and it was agreed that the Fourth could not overcome this lead. There was some surprise when the Fourth ward returns increased the plurality.

The Daily News system of securing the returns from the ward rooms to the office worked satisfactorily, as usual, and it was only a very few minutes after the results were announced before they were bulletined in the News window, automobiles and bicycles being used to facilitate the publishing of the returns. The full reportorial staff was on duty, and the results have rarely been given to the public in a more satisfactory manner.

The Daily News took it for granted that everybody knew, and so did not announce that it proposed to receive and make public the election returns as usual. The people did know and were eager to learn how things had gone, and by telephone and in person looked to the News as usual. There was the same big bulletin board in the window and the same corps of operators to answer telephone calls, while this service was backed by a force of collectors who covered each voting place, and another set of tabulators who put the figures together.

The only shortcoming was that Thames street was not equal to the crowd which gathered in front of the News building. The people were so numerous that they spread out both up and down the street, completely blocking it to both foot and vehicular traffic except with the greatest difficulty. Police reserves were on duty, not to keep order—for the crowd was good-natured—but to guard their safety.

The crowd were stayers, for while it was practically assured before 9 o'clock that Burlingame was elected mayor and that the fire department reorganization was carried, the mass of people were not satisfied; they were anxious to know that there was no possibility of the count in the Fourth ward changing the pluralities. In the gathering were an unusual number of women, at times probably fully one fifth, and from the questions many of them asked it looked as if it were the

MERCHANTS USING SEALS.

Business men who have purchased Christmas Red Cross seals are using them in various ways, as several of their customers learned this morning when they received their monthly bills. Miss Akerley, who has charge of the distribution, also learned as she was going to her office. She had walked but a short distance from her home when she was accosted by a friend who said: "Ah, I see you have sold some of your stamps to the business men." As she proceeded farther others met her with similar remarks, about bills they had received. One said "Mine came from the Boston store," and a few: "I found no seals on my bills. Are not all the Newport merchants using the Red Cross seals?" Miss Akerley replied that many of them have the seals and some propose to use them on the packages they send out.

Miss Akerley is pleased with the way the seals are going. There is already a good nest egg in the bank, merchants are responding generously, and there are prospects of a good sale during the holiday season.

A JOLLY GOOD TIME.

Vested Choir of First Methodist Episcopal Church Entertained.

No planned program, but just a jolly good time—that is what the young men and women of the vested choir of the First Methodist Episcopal Church had Tuesday evening, when they were entertained at the home of Mrs. T. W. Freeborne and Miss Alice C. Banning on Spring street. As a musical program was the proper thing for the start of an entertainment for such a gathering, Mrs. Freeborne gave a short description of Beethoven's "Pastoral Symphony." Later she and Miss Banning played the storm movement, depicting in Beethoven's marvelous way the gathering of the peasants, the thunder, and the gratitude of the people because of deliverance. Mr. Nelson R. Duby, Miss Helen Reynolds and Miss Hattie Duby sang solos.

Games of many sorts were played and after a little ensemble singing the party adjourned to the next room for refreshments. Later chestnuts were roasted and marshmallows toasted before an open fire. A good time was certainly enjoyed by all and the party didn't break up until a late hour.

POLICE BUSINESS.

Men, Also Women, in Altercations Which Need Settlement.

A man went to see another man in the interests of a deal and was asked to make change for $10. When he carelessly displayed something green with a five on it the other man snatched it and refused to give up the ten spot. The first man, not liking this form of hospitality, made a fight and succeeded in re-capturing the $5, and also in nearly wrecking the room. He found that the door was locked, and as he had no way to escape he promptly called "murder," which brought a couple of policemen to the scene on the jump. The other man left during the excitement, just before the officers arrived. It seems likely, however, that he will soon be rounded up.

The regular routine of the district court was broken somewhat Tuesday. It was nothing serious; just a little fight between two women on William street. The tenant, who owed a small rent bill, came home to find that while she had been down street the owner of the house had removed the windows. There were high words, and finally scratches on both sides. As yet no settlement has been satisfactorily made.

There was another row, on Gould street, and one of the participants was put far from evil influences for six months.

The probation officer surrendered one common drunkard, who was given six months.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

—Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Mrs. J. L. Van Alen went to New York this morning.

—The highway department men are still on the same jobs, except that one gang is putting in a new crossing at Park place.

—Mr. H. Wood Thompson has returned from New York, where he went for the purpose of attending opera at the Metropolitan.

—The supper served Tuesday evening by the women of the Swedish Lutheran Church proved a popular event. Tables were set in three relays and about $60 was realized.

—The children received this afternoon one of the rare treats given them by the school authorities, when the one-session bell rang. Though some of them may have been hungry, they were all glad school was over for the day.

—Officer Coggeshall has left for a vacation and expects to visit several gun clubs between Wickford and Kingston. Those who know him expect to see him return laden with trophies wrested from the teams of the various clubs.

—The sale by the Women's Relief Corps of Lawton-Warren Post Thursday will help shoppers answer the perplexing question: "What shall I give my friends for Cristmas." For those who prefer amusement there will be dancing, the music being furnished by Hall's orchestra.

—Though this is the best possible kind of weather for the work, the men who have been putting in the trees around the railroad station were not on the job today. The trees seem to be in good condition, and this rain would help them get a better grip on the soil.

—That the Father Mathews are leaving no stone unturned in their efforts to defeat the All Star basket ball five Thursday evening is evidenced by the fact that almost nightly practices are being held, and the strongest team they can muster will be on the floor. J. B. Cottrell at forward and John Morgan at guard, who did not appear in the first game, are expected to strengthen the team. The All Stars are also going into the game with —The marriage of Miss Leila Harrison, daughter of the late Colonel George F. E. Harrison, U. S. A., to Lieutenant Geoffrey Keyes, Sixth cavalry, took place Tuesday afternoon in Washington. The bride is a sister of Lieutenant E. S. Harrison, coast artillery corps, who was a few years ago stationed at Fort Adams, where his mother and sister made their home for a time. Lieutenant and Mrs. Keyes will go to Galveston, Texas, where the former is stationed.

TWO CHANGES IN COUNCIL.

L. M. Shaw and H. C. Lawton Displace C. S. Braman and J. O. Barker.

Official Count in the First Ward Shows Gain for Gifford for School Committee.

The Board of Aldermen began this morning the count of the ballots cast in Tuesday's election, meeting in the aldermanic chamber, where they were able to strip off their coats and settle right down to business. Early this afternoon they had completed the counting of the big district of the First ward and at once decided that they would do the two smaller districts before they ate.

The changes made in the warden's count were immaterial, Burlingame meeting a net loss of 4 in the mayoralty contest. There were a few changes on the School Committee ticket, the interest centering between Mr. Gifford and Father Reddy, who were only one vote apart in the figures of election night. In this district Gifford gained 6 and Reddy lost 1, a net gain of 7 for Gifford.

In the count for aldermen generally each candidate suffered a loss, but these were small and do not effect the general results. Asher lost 1, Hanley lost 5, Kirby lost 1, Thompson made the only gain, 6; Hughes lost 1, so did Jones, Perdue lost 3, Brown lost 1, Flynn lost 1, Kelly lost 3, McLeish lost 4, and those unnamed did not suffer a change.

The Council ticket ran much the same way.

The aldermen completed the count of the Fird ward votes before they took a recess for dinner. The official count for members of the Representative Council gives the following as elected: William Brightman, Fred E. Lawton, Fred S. Bacheller, H. V. Easton, William J. Carr, John F. Adams, William J. Christmas, Thomas Hackett, Leon M. Shaw, Thomas E. Sherman, W. F. Barker, Herbert C. Lawton. This puts Shaw and H. C. Lawton on the elected list in place of C. S. Braman and J. O. Barker.

SUCCESSFUL ACTS.

Funniest Man in Juggling Business Coming to the Opera House.

On the new bill of vaudeville and pictures which will be ushered in at the Opera House Thursday afternoon, Jack Orne, eccentric juggler, has this season achieved the reputation of being the funniest man in the business. Graham and Randall, who won their fame on the "legitimate" stage, will appear in a sketch, "A Gay Old Man," which was a big success in Boston last week. The Filipino quartet, European vocalists and instrumentalists, will present a 15-minute act. The four Xelo Sisters are another Keith attraction, these young women constituting one of the best dancing teams on the stage. When the present European war broke out they were the sensation of Paris.

The feature picture will be the well known drama, "Salomy Jane," with Beatrix Michelena, in the title role and a cast including Andrew Robson and House Peters. This production was originally made by Liebler & Co. The settings of the story, under the supervision of Alex. E. Beyfuss, are laid among the famous California redwoods.

"HIS LITTLE KINGDOM" DRESS REHEARSAL.

A dress rehearsal of "His Little Kingdom," to be presented at the Colonial Theatre this evening, was held this morning with all the stage properties in place. It found every member of the cast competent, not only in the lines but also in the puzzling details of stage business, upon which the successful presentation of a play so largely depends. The matinee was fairly well attended and the sale of tickets for the evening has been satisfactory.

THE LATE ADMIRAL MAHAN AT THE WAR COLLEGE.

The late Admiral Alfred T. Mahan, U. S. N. (retired) whose death was announced in Tuesday's News, was president of the Naval War College from 1886 to 1889, and from July, 1892, to May, 1893, and has frequently lectured before the classes at the college on matters relating to naval tactics and strategy, on which he was universally recognized in this country and abroad as an authority. He was well known among naval officers and his lectures at the War College always attracted many retired officers to hear what he had to say.

SUPPLIES FOR BRITISH SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

Again this week two large cases were sent off by the Newport branch of the British War Relief Fund, one containing old linen and other hospital necessities, and the other 100 knitted articles as well as warm shirts, etc. Contributions of money have also been received, and letters from England speak of the great appreciation of the work done by this society and of the great and pressing need of all the articles sent by it. The Newport contributions are shipped each Wednesday and within the past five weeks 10 large cases have been sent.

A POLITICAL PROGRAM.

Interesting Points Made at Brotherhood Meeting of Second Baptist Church.

At the regular meeting of the Brotherhood of the Second Baptist Church Tuesday evening President J. W. Blaine presided over a short business meeting, after which a political program was in order. Mr. W. H. Langley, chairman of the civic committee, gave an instructive talk on his observations as a member of the Representative Council. Colonel John C. Seabury and Mr. George W. Bacheller, Jr., spoke on methods of council work, and Deacon W. P. Carr, president of the Council under the old form of government, of a few of his personal experiences. All brought out interesting points which were the subject of discussion by several other members. The women of the church served a luncheon.

Begin Your Xmas Shopping Early. Why Not Today?

The Advantages of Early Christmas Shopping.

The advantages are so many that we have space to enumerate a small part only. "First Choice"—this means freshness, newness and often exclusiveness. "Save yourself the annoyance of crowds," for what man or woman likes to be shoved about in a crowded store or thoroughfare? Crowds add to the burden of shopping.

"Better Service"—no matter how perfect any store service may be, unexpected rush will many times overtax it, and consequently both the store and the customer suffer.

"Help the Clerks and Delivery Boys"—this is the first reason for shopping early. It should find a response in the heart of every Christmas shopper who would like to have everybody enjoy a really happy Christmas.

GERMANS NEAR REVOLT.

Large Bodies of Troops Kept in the Cities to Prevent Outbreak.

Authentic particulars regarding the general state of affairs in Germany are said to have been obtained by the correspondent of the New York Tribune in Amsterdam, from an impartial and reliable source. They show that the number of unemployed in the fatherland, without counting those who have joined the colors, are fully 10,000,000. The result is growing discontent on all sides. The people are sullen for the present, but are likely to burst forth any time.

The authorities are taking no chances, and despite the urgent need of men in the field they keep large bodies of troops in reserve for emergencies in all large cities, but especially in Cologne, where the situation has once or twice assumed a threatening aspect. Only recently has the truth with regard to the war begun to trickle through. Notwithstanding the precautions taken, Swiss, Swedish and Danish papers have been smuggled into the country, and the better classes, at any rate, now know that not only is Paris not besieged, but that neither Calais nor Havre run any danger, and that it is untrue that the Germans are at Dijon.

These revelations have had an upsetting influence and have convinced the most optimistic that the Germans will have a hard fight to win. Things had reached this state before the refugees came pouring in from East Prussia. Their appearance caused positive consternation. It is estimated that the German losses in Prussia by reason of the Russian invasion already have reached £15,000,000, most of which is sustained by the junkers, who are all-powerful there. This is likely to have considerable bearing on the future of the war for the junkers have a large voice in the conduct of affairs, and their enthusiasm for war has diminished visibly since the Russians started advancing in earnest.

There is no moratorium in Germany, and the result is that the smaller shopkeepers are completely ruined already, chiefly owing to the wholesale collapse of the smaller and purely local banks and the closing down of 80 per cent of the provincial branches of all the large credit banks. No one has any money because of this, while credit has entirely disappeared. Those who saw what was coming or who had time to save anything out of the wreck sent all their money and securities to Switzerland—or, that is, as much as they dared, for through the income tax returns the fiscal authorities knew the exact standing of everybody and used the information to advantage to force subscriptions exacted for the national defense loan. For this same operation every savings bank, friendly society and such institutions were denuded of every pfennig of their reserves, while, as already known, private banking accounts were raided to the same extent.

SMOCKS AT SMITH.

Campus Dotted With Girls in Bright Colors a Pretty Sight.

Every fall finds Smith College girls with some new hobby, and this year the rage is for smocks. Smocks of yellow, smocks of green, smocks of orange, and smocks of many other colors may be seen these autumn days dotting the campus of that largest college for women. And the result is alluring. Cut three-quarters length, the smocks may be worn inside or outside the skirt; made with short sleeves and low in the neck, a white waist may be worn beneath them, softening the effect by white at the neck and for undersleeves.

One small girl, a senior, started the fashion by appearing in a smock, dull blue in color, worn outside her skirt. It set off her light hair and gray-blue eyes, and she was soon surrounded by a crowd of admirers. "Where did you get it?" was the query. "Do you mind if I get one something like it?"

And the style for smocks was started. They are artistic garments, nicely made, and the campus dotted with girls in bright colored waists is a pretty sight.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

Cave-Ins at Culebra Likely to Continue Until Mountains are Removed.

Once Thriving Towns Deserted and Region Not Such as to Create Any Amount of Trade.

[Washington correspondence of the News.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—There are a lot of interesting facts connected with the Panama canal that are not generally known. An Englishman was visiting the canal zone not long ago and when he saw the great Gatun lake, which has been made into an immense reservoir to supply the canal with water and to curb the onslaught of heavy rains and freshets of that region, remarked to Colonel Goethals, the army engineer, "What a fortunate thing it was that you had this great lake here!" As that lake was the creation of Colonel Goethals his disgust can be appreciated.

Salt water is carried into that lake, although it is 85 feet above sea level. It comes in with boats from one lake to another. Salt water fish get into the lake through the locks, but they cannot live in the fresh water. Miraflores lake, which is only one lock high on the Pacific side, is too salt to furnish a water supply for the towns on the west coast.

The trees which were partially submerged by the big lake are dying off and disappearing. They fall into the bottom of the lake and seem to be lost in the mud. The floating islands, which were so common when the lake was first flooded, are sinking to the bottom or gathering on the banks.

Gatun lake is full of fish of all kinds. They are expected to destroy the spawn of mosquitoes. Owing to the great size of the lake petroleum cannot be spread over the surface of the water. It was by the use of petroleum that the mosquitoes bearing yellow fever and malarial fever were destroyed.

There are no wild fowl on the lake or in the surrounding country. The water is said to be too deep to attract them, although there should be plenty of marsh land along its edges, but the inference is that the canal zone is not a wild fowl country.

The Chagres river, which was so long considered a menace to any kind of canal construction, is now no longer dangerous. It empties into Gatun lake, but this body of water is so large that it makes only a slight impression, although the river furnishes the largest continuous supply of water for the canal.

No fear is felt about the water supply of the lake. The spillways are frequently opened to discharge the surplus. There is little seepage and no indication that the water will break through at any point.

Panama will not be attractive for tourists. They no longer seem to be going there. The number is few in comparison to a few years ago. The canal is no longer interesting. The big locks, the cuts and the lakes are full of water and there is little evidence of the great work which has been accomplished.

The only real idea of the canal, and when it becomes impressive as such, is when one passes through Culebra cut. That cut is like a canal cut through the earth. And there is the awful feeling that the sides of those high mountains will slide down on you and smash you to bits before you can escape." It is believed that there will be many slides at this point until the mountains are leveled down and the pressure upon the deep cut has been relieved.

Before the war in Europe a large part of the canal construction machinery was being sold in different countries for about 60 per cent of its cost, but nothing is being done in that line now. Some machinery is sold for use in South America. It is not believed that much of the machinery is adaptable to the construction of the railroad in Alaska, although provision was made to use such machinery adaptable to the work. The engines cannot be used, as they are broad gauge, while the Alaska railroad will be standard gauge.

The many bustling, thriving towns that were once seen along the canal have disappeared. They have been deserted, because there is no further use for them. They were occupied by canal workers, who have gone.

It is not believed there will be any great cities in Panama on account of the canal. Commerce will be passing through the canal and will not be distributed from either end of the waterway; hence there will be no great commercial warehouses, save those for coal and others which supply ships in transit. The region around the canal is not such as to create any great amount of trade. In fact, it is rather anticipated that the canal zone has seen its most lively days.

Senator Borah has been several times nominated for President of the United States, on paper, and in case he should be accorded that honor in 1916 it will be difficult for any man to prove himself "the original Borah man." His most recent sponsor of prominence is ex-Governor Warmoth of Louisiana. Warmoth might well be styled "the stormy petrel of the Pelican State." Many and many a time he has appeared at a national convention either a contestant or a contesting delegate. The Republican party in Louisiana [illegible], but it has many factions. T[illegible] always a contesting delegation [illegible] ne times three or four and W[illegible] is always on hand. Sometimes he wins and sometimes he loses, according to the faction with which he is associated.

One night about ten days after the election, when the reports had been first one way and then another as to the Senatorial result in Nevada a telegram was received at the Democratic headquarters from that state which read: "I am elected by more than 100 majority," and was signed by Senator Newlands.

"He speaks of it as if it was a great achievement," said one of the prominent Democrats present, and his tone showed that he did not consider 100 majority anything to brag about.

But that 100 no doubt looked pretty big to Newlands after so many ups and downs.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The American Civic Association met here today in annual convention, with delegates from throughout the country in attendance. Today's sessions were given over to welcoming addresses and to the presentation of greetings from a number of affiliated societies.

FEEDING THE FLEET.

The British Bluejackets' Fare "Nothing to Shout About."

[London Tit-Bits.]

Ask "Jack" what he thinks of the food on board, and he will probably say: "It's nothing to shout about," at the same time admitting that if you are hungry it's not "bad tack." The mutton comes from Australia, the tinned beef (called "Fanny Adams," a name which is supposed to commemorate the awful fate of an overcurious young lady who was once tempted to try a sailor) from America, while the pickled pork hails from Russia. And it cannot be called exactly fresh killed, for the authorities believe in having an inexhaustible supply in stock. The consequence is that at Malta there is a seven years' supply of Chicago beef stored, not counting a large quantity at Gibraltar.

The home victualling yards are the Royal Victoria at Deptford (close to the cattle trade centre), the Royal Clarence at Gosport, and the Royal William at Plymouth. There are also depots at the Cape of Good Hope, Halifax, Bermuda, Hong Kong, Trincomalee, Jamaica, Sydney and Esquimault.

To eat with his meat the sailor has ship's biscuit, or "hard tack," out of which it has been found almost impossible to keep the weevils, says the Globe. Flour, oatmeal, cocoa, mustard, and pepper are also issued, with limejuice for all hands and oatmeal water for the stokers. This, with rum, makes up the official dietary of the British bluejacket.

By a system officially known as "savings," however, the tar can add variety to his bill of fare. A mess of 21 men, entitled to draw 24 pounds of meat, may agree to draw only 18 pounds. The balance is credited to the mess as savings, on the following scale: Pork, 4d a pound; salt beef, 1½d a pound; tinned beef, 5d a pound. On cocoa 5d per pound is saved, and on rum 2s a gallon. The money thus saved is pooled among the men and spent at the dry canteen, where sardines, tinned salmon and other humble luxuries can be obtained.

RUBENS MANSION SPARED.

Famous House in Belgium Suffers Little From Depredations of War.

The famous sixteenth century mansion of Rubens, the great Flemish painter, standing in the line of the German sweep through Belgium, between Brussels and Antwerp, has suffered little from the depreciations of war, although an unknown vandal has defaced some of the paintings that cover its walls. For weeks it had been impossible to approach the place and there was much anxiety as to its fate.

The Germans had converted this shrine of art lovers to the service of war, but neither the house nor the fine old garden suffered much. The house is now used as a pay station for the German troops. In the garden are many roughly marked graves of Belgian and German soldiers. One stray bullet found its way into the house, which is surrounded by heaps of rubbish and broken bottles. No doubt a thorough cleaning will transform the place to the quaint mansion which Rubens built for his young wife, the woman who appears in nearly all the paintings of his later years, and the mother of the boy whose baby face smiles out from so many of his canvases.

Some civilian souvenir hunter is declared to be responsible for the only intentional act of vandalism committed on the property, which is now owned by Belgian Senator de Becker-Hemy. The vandal cut the faces out of some of the pictures that hung in the house.

During the German advance to Antwerp, a German detachment of 50 soldiers occupied the mansion. A Belgian peasant managed to slip through the German lines and notify the Belgian troops. That night a strong detachment of Belgian soldiers surrounded the house and after a desperate fight killed all the occupants. The Germans were buried in the old garden. Later the Belgians were forced to abandon the place.

STAUS DENIES REPORT.

Resignation from Japan Society Not Because of Sympathy for Germany.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Oscar S. Straus, a member of The Hague tribunal and former Secretary of Commerce and Labor in the cabinet of President Roosevelt, today denied the report that he had just resigned from the Japan Society because he sympathized with Germany, with whom Japn is at war. "This statement is utterly false," said Mr. Straus. "I resigned from te Japan Society a month ago as I did from a number of organizations. I did so because I wanted to cut off all unecessary expense and devote the money thus saved to the relief of those who suffered as the result of the war."

Mr. Straus pointed to interviews granted by im hin London last August and upon his return to this country to disprove the statement that he is pro-German.

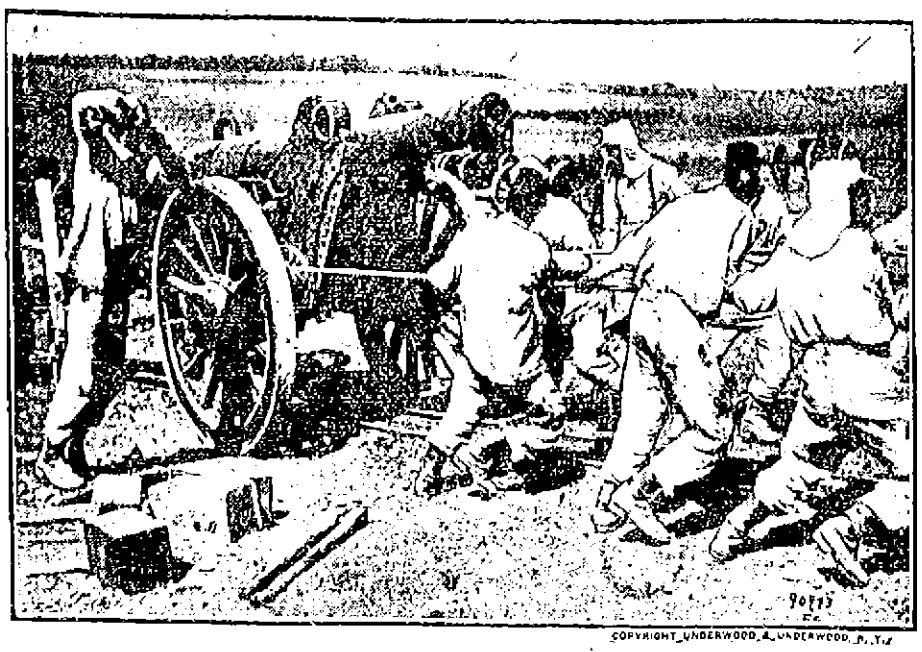
MANCHESTER, N. H., Dec. 2.—The Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, employing 16,000 people, announced today that they would begin immediately to run on full time. For several months the mills have been running only four and a half days a week and several departments have been closed entirely for many weeks. The Amoskeag officials state that there are sure signs of a business boom setting in which is the reason for their running full time.

LIGHT RECEIPTS REPORTED.

Few Cattle Received Since Lifting Quarantine at Herr's Island.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 2.—Although the foot and mouth disease quarantine against the Herr's Island stock yards was lifted last week and the yards declared open for the receipt of cattle from free territory, receipts have been too light to permit of quotations. Brokers said they expected little improvement until the quarantine against Indiana and Ohio is lifted.



COPYRIGHT, UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N.Y.

MOVING A HEAVY FRENCH ARTILLERY PIECE INTO ACTION.

BRYAN MEETS SCHWAB.

Gives Views on Building Submarines Here for Other Navies.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Secretary Bryan today invited Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company to the State Department and gave him the views of the American government on the building of submarines in this country for European navies.

Mr. Bryan declined to disclose what was the position of the American government. He declared that the question was not yet concluded, but under consideration. Mr. Schwab, accompanied by two assistants, also refused to discuss their mission.

"Mr. Schwab came," said Mr. Bryan, "in response to our inquiry concerning the manufacture in this country of ships or materials for shipbuilding."

Recent reports that the Bethlehem Steel Company had contracted to build submarines which would be shipped across in sections have been variously denied and partially confirmed. The visit of Mr. Schwab, however, revealed that the State Department had taken official cognizance of the subject, although Secretary Bryan announced yesterday that government agents, after a thorough investigation, had been unable to learn that any work was being done anywhere in this country in the construction of foreign warships or parts thereof.

It was believed, however, that the State Department desired to consult with the Steel company officials. While the export of munitions of war, such as guns, shells or ammunition, is not prohibited by the neutrality laws, the fitting out of the warships or any armed expedition from American soil would be considered a violation.

IN HEALTH SERVICE REPORT.

Number Addicted to Narcotic Drugs Not as Large as Supposed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—That the number of persons in the United States addicted to the habitual use of narcotic drugs is not nearly so large as had been supposed is the conclusion of the public health service, in a report today. It had been estimated that between one and two per cent of the population were drug habitues. Declaring that while this estimate is undoubtedly too high, the report says the figures show the existence of all too many habitual users of drugs. The belief is expressed also that the evils due to the improper use of such drugs have been greatly exaggerated.

The conclusions are based on data furnished by the Tennessee authorities, which, the report states, show that during the first six months of the operation of the state anti-narcotic law, 1,403 permits were issued to persons, allowing them to purchase narcotic drugs, and also on figures giving the approximate number of average doses of habit-forming drugs imported into the United States in 1911 and 1912, being respectively 4,040,000,000 and 2,508,500,000. On the basis of the figures for the years named, the report says, it will appear that basing an estimate on the average consumption of the drug habitue in Tennessee, each addict would consume approximately 1,000 doses each month or 12,000 doses a year.

"The state of Tennessee," the report states, "contains approximately two per cent of the total population of the United States, and on the supposition that the same ratio of the number of addicts and the amount of material consumed will hold good throughout the United States, we would have a total of something more than 70,000 drug habitues, consuming approximately 850,000,000 average doses per year. This quantity probably is somewhat low but it is fair to assume that not more than double this amount, or approximately 1,700,000,000 average doses are consumed annually by drug habitues."

BOND MARKET DULL.

Trading in Few Issues and Transactions in Small Lots.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Extreme dullness characterized the opening of the bond market today. Trading in the first 10 minutes embraced less than 10 issues and transactions were in small lots. Only a few changes were noted. Central Leather 5's advancing ½ of a point and St. Paul convertible 4½'s Southern Pacific convertible 5's and Texas Company convertible 6's declining minor fractions.

Business during the morning session was lighter than on the previous day. The greater part of the transactions recorded were for five to 10 bonds and less. The trend was again downward, with losses of 2 to 5 points in Atlantic Coast Line collateral 4's, Brooklyn Gas 5's, and New York Gas and Electric 4's. Gains were recorded in Chicago Rock Island & Pacific Railways 5's, which rose half a point; Lorillard 5's, 5's, and New York Railways 5's one point.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 2.—Melbourne Inman, English billiard champion, twice defeated Willie Hoppe at English billiards yesterday. The scores were 750 to 453 and 750 to 340. Today they will meet at 18.2 balk line in two matches.

CROWD EASER FOR RETURNS.

question of a better the department which held them to the scene.

While the News began to receive the returns at 6:56 and it was 12:45 a. m. when the last tally card was brought to the office by an automobile on Slippery Thames street, it was possible to announce the full vote for mayor at 12:25. This was before the Fourth ward count was read in that wardroom to the waiting gathering, who had stood about and fretted while the election officials took their own course.

It was always a difficult task for a driver of a vehicle to pass through the crowd without injuring any one. Several drivers, however, were bound to display their skill at the wheel by essaying the difficult journey, made worse by a thin layer of mud on the pavement, in front of the Daily News Office. Toward the latter part of the evening, when every one was anxious for news from the Fourth ward, any move to put new returns on the big bulletin in the window was greeted with loud and prolonged cheers. The excitement prevailed until late at night, many of the crowd remaining until nearly morning.

Though there didn't seem to be any signs of a parade, an ancient carriage so covered with signs as to be barely recognizable created considerable comment around town. This vehicle was occupied by several grotesque specimens of humanity—young men in a wide variety of costume, with good lungs and a big supply of wit, having "the time of their life." They refused to give any clue to their identity, though it is strongly suspected that they were part of a campaign featured by Alderman Kelly. The alderman also had a motley group of young followers in a miniature drum corps, the drums represented by dish pans and other tin ware. The posters displayed by these youngsters all bore a striking resemblance to those prepared by the alderman.

The older members of the high school classes were out in force, but their vigorous search for Juniors, eligible for initiation, was feebly rewarded. The Juniors seemed to have other engagements, which kept them away from the business district. The upper class men were disappointed, but strove to make the best of it by horse play among themselves. The city authorities, the police, showed no sympaty, but relentlessly suppressed these ardent youth.

There were on the voting lists 5,739 names—2,028 real estate, 2,342 personal property and 1,369 registry. A year ago there were 2,017 real estate, 2,276 personal property and 790 registry voters, a total of 5,083. This shows a gain of 656 in totals, the registry voters numbering 579. The vote cast was about 78 per cent of the total on the lists.

INCREASE IN RATES.

Change in New Haven Passenger Schedule Effective January 1.

Passenger rates on all branches of the New Haven road in this state and to points outside Rhode Island will be increased approximately one quarter of a cent a mile, beginning January 1, 1915, according to a new tariff filed with the Public Utilities Commission. The proposed increase is intended, it is said, as an additional source of revenue for the road, while it will at the same time make rates on nearly all its branches uniform at approximately 2½ cents a mile.

Under the law, 30 days notice is required of the railroad in the case of an increase in rates, and it is because of this that the tariff has been filed with the Utilities Commission a month before becoming operative.

CONSCRIPTION NEEDLESS.

America Would Not Rob the Youth of Five of Their Productive Years.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

The people of the United States will never tolerate the Continental form of conscription. To rob the youth of America of five of the productive years of their lives would be an intolerable infringement of private liberty. Neither is it necessary. All that needs to be done to prepare an adequate military force for the defense of this country can be accomplished without interfering with our industrial efficiency. If all boys, upon reaching the age of 15, were given six months of summer training it would be of inestimable good to them as a physical equipment, and in establishing habits of orderliness, promptness and obedience. Industrial training for two hours a day could be added to the regiment. The manual at arms and field formations can be easily taught to plastic youths in six weeks, and a more than fair mastery of the rifle can be acquired in six months in the summer with systematic range practice.

WAR TAX INCOME SOON.

Customs and Internal Revenue Receipts for November Decrease.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Customs and internal revenue receipts for November show a marked decrease from the same month last year. Customs receipts were $15,924,[illegible], compared with $21,172,628 for November 1913, while internal revenue receipts at $21,359,963 were nearly $5,000,000 less than in the same month last year. For the month the excess of ordinary disbursement over receipts was $16,-880,863, compared with an excess of the same sort last yar of $2,713,732.

Income from the war tax will begin to show this month. Custom receipts despite the comparison with November 1913, were $650,000 greater than October.

OLD TRUTHS TO BE LEARNED.

Dr. Chapin Addresses the American Public Health Association.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 1.—Untruthful and unscientific statements in bulletins issued by state departments of health were severely criticised by Dr. Charles F. Chapin, superintendent of health of Providence, R. I., in an address before the American Public Health Association today. "For the sake of those who come after, stop filling your columns with tommy-rot, hot air and dope," he said. "Do not be always seeking novelty. Most that is new is bad. There are plenty of old truths which all of our 100,000,000 people have not yet learned."

Among the fallacies being spread to the detriment of real public health work, Dr. Chapin cited what he called the "old heresy about the all-importance of dirt in the causation of disease." He said that it is doubtless true that whatever encourages cleanliness tends to discourage the habits which favor infection, but he believed hat "to fight all kinds of dirt instead of limiting attacks to dangerous dirt is misleading and futile."

Dr. Chapin especially criticised much of the publicity on the relation of air to disease. He stated that the old theory of exhaled poisons had been demolished; that germs rarely floated in the air; that we are still in profound ignorance as to the relation of humidity to disease; that most of the supposed effects of foul, unventilated rooms have been shown to be due to temperature and odors.

"Food adulteration, except in a few instances," he said, "is an economic, not a health problem. As to partially decayed foods we know nothing about their relation to health. The clean handling of foods is most desirable from a sanitary standpoint, but real cleanliness is most difficult of attainment. Much that appears is carelessly written and the emphasis is placed on the wrong thing, as when dust absorbs all the attention and nothing is said about dirty hands."

STORAGE BATTERY TIPS.

Complete Charging Necessary as the Cold Produces Sluggishness.

"With the coming of the cold weather the storage battery used in connection with the starting and lighting systems may require a little extra attention," states E. W. Headington of the Haynes Automobile Company. "A cold motor requires much cranking, and consequently much current is used. The effect of cold on a storage battery is to make it sluggish. A hydrometer should be used frequently to see that the battery is not being discharged to too low a degree.

"A storage battery will gradually become discharged when standing idle, even when no current is being used, due to the fact that a slow chemical action is taking place at all times within the battery, regardless of whether the current is being used or not. When a car is not to be used for as long as two or three weeks the battery should receive a complete charge, and it should receive additional charging at least every two or three weeks, until the cells begin to gas or bubble freely.

"This charging is best done by allowing the battery to remain in the car without disturbing any of the connections, by allowing the engine to run at the same speed as is attained when the car is traveling at about 20 miles an hour."

Minister of Finance to Control Foreign Subjects' Expenditures.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 2.—An imperial ukase, issued today, authorizes the minister of finance to take control of the expenditures and receipts of societies, companies and enterprises founded or operated in Russia by subjects of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey. The ukase expressly prohibits, without the special authorization of the minister of finance, the payment, delivery, or transfer of any ready money, papers of value, silver, gold plate and precious stones that may be owned by subjects of the countries mentioned.

It is provided that all payments to subjects of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey who chance to be outside Russia but possess there commercial establishments or real estate shall be effected in Russia through due legal process.

EUROPEAN FETISH OVERTHROWN

War Providing Boon to American Musicians and Teachers.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—The European war is providing a great boon to American musicians, composers and teachers, according to Dr. Hugh A. Clarke, professor of music at the University of Pennsylvania, who yesterday addressed the convention of the Sinfonia Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity.

"The war has been the means of overthrowing the great European fetish, which was held sacred by Americans," he said. "Formerly no American artist could appear as a soloist with an orchestra unless he could claim foreign finish. The American public is beginning to see the true worth of their artists and will hereafter furnish them the support which they have been so long denied.

"Conservatories all report that they have had thus far a remarkably successful year. Orchestras are complying with a popular demand by placing mostly American numbers on their programs."

BELGIAN SOLDIER HONORED

Young Man Receives Decorations for His Brilliant Exploits.

No Belgian soldier is receiving more acclaim in the French press than Emile Sapin who, at the age of 22, has received the decoration of the order of Leopold and the cross of the Legion of Honor. Le Matin confesses it could not believe all the brilliant exploits attributed to this young man, who was a private when war was declared, and who was made a corporal only a month ago, but that it has investigated through inquiries, not only of Sapin himself, who is now in a Cherbourg hospital, but also of many others, and it cheerfully recognized the following achievements:

First during the siege of Liege, Sapin was in the fort of Loncin. Climbing a tree and concealed by its leaves, he killed an entire battery of heavy artillery, said to number 42 men. It is claimed that the commanding officer of this battery reached the foot of the tree, revolver in hand, only to fall as the rest had fallen, from a bullet sent out of Sapin's rifle.

Secondly, two weeks later, he personally captured the flag of a regiment of Hussars, whose colonel he also shot.

Third, near Louvain, sent out in the company of six other men, Sapin succeeded in capturing 40 soldiers, including one officer.

Getting the Strategic Position

IN commerce, as in warfare, it is usually the man holding the best strategic position that wins. The only times when he doesn't are when he fails to note the superior advantages of his location. The parcel post, once dreaded by the small merchant as giving an added advantage to his big competitor, the mail order house, has really placed him in a superior strategic position. He is now the center of a district extending fifty miles in every direction wherein he can ship goods at a much lower postal rate and much more expeditiously than any one outside that zone.

A leaf from the book of his ancient competitors, the mail order concerns, might aid him in reaping the fruits of his advantage. People will not send half a thousand miles or more and wait a fortnight for something that they can get as readily from the man nearer home, delivered almost overnight.

BATTLESHIP CONSTRUCTION

Armored Bottoms of Warcraft a Defense Against Under-Water Attacks.

While American navy officers have watched with critical eyes the deadly work of torpedoes fired from submarines and of contact mines in the European war, nothing has developed as yet which indicates any radical change in battleship construction to offer greater defense against under-water attacks. The problems presented are not new. They have been studied by naval constructors of every power since the Russian-Japanese war when many fine ships fell victim to mines and torpedoes. Proposals of many sorts have been discussed. Some have been adopted; but the theory of warship building still clings to concentration of offensive power in terms of larger guns, bigger and swifter ships and wider cruising radius, even at the expense of defensive armor.

The heavy losses sustained by the British navy by submarine attacks has brought up for renewed discussion the subject of armoring the bottoms of warcraft. Recent issues of English service journals have noted a plan to cover the entire bottom of a battleship with four inches of armor plating. It was urged that the experiment be tried with an old ship which should be subjected to actual test with the explosion against her hull of the most powerful modern torpedoes. The ship also would be driven into contact mines of various types, to determine their effect, it was said.

American naval experts believe there is little doubt of the result. They say four inches of armor would resist any known torpedo or mine successfully. To equip a ship in that way, however, the enormous weight of the armor would require a reduction in weight elsewhere and the only way it could be accomplished would be to reduce the size and number of guns, the thickness of surface armor, the weight of engines and coal capacity and because of this last, the size of the ships themselves. With armored bottom battleships would become slow, heavy vessels of small cruising radius and their usefulness as instruments with which to strike swift, terrible blows at distant points before word of their coming had gone out would vanish. Cruisers and swift merchant vessels would take care only to keep out of range of their guns. The terrific power of the modern dreadnought would be a thing of the past.

It is not impossible, however, that some degree of protection for the bottoms of battle craft will be considered in future. Heretofore constructors have relied almost wholly upon increasing numbers of watertight compartments to keep torpedoed ships afloat. The loss of British battleship Audacious, one of the most modern fighting machines in the world, has shed new light on the subject. Details of that disaster are lacking but many believe the Audacious ran into a mine which sent her to the bottom. Her compartments kept her afloat until her crew was rescued; but one by one they gave way under the increasing pressure of water and finally she went down.

Navy officers are unwilling as yet to predict what effect on naval construction that will have. They say it is a question of balance between offense and defense in battleship construction and the old axiom that the greatest defense lies in the highest capacity for offensive work still holds good. It appears certain, however, that in planning new ships the subject of armored bottom, or at least partial armor for the midships sections of the bottom, will be carefully weighed.

TIME FOR VESSELS.

The Navy Radio Stations Furnishing Signals Twice Each Day.

Through the navy radio stations, vessels navigating the North Atlantic ocean and Gulf of Mexico have been furnished standard time for their chronometers twice each day, at noon and at 10 o'clock p. m., according to the annual report of the superintendent of the Naval Observatory, Captain J. A. Hoogewerff, U. S. N. The same service for vessels in the Pacific has been rendered by the Mare Island station.

"The importance to navigation of these two signals," Captain Hoogewerff says, "is referred to in a report from a merchant vessel which states that its chronometers have been checked daily from New York to a point 600 miles north of Rio de Janeiro, when the distance from Arlington was 4,250 miles. The noon signal also is sent by radio from Key West and New Orleans, covering the northern part of the Gulf of Mexico. Since May 7, 1911, a special 10 o'clock p. m. radio signal has been sent out from Key West for the benefit of our vessels in Mexican waters. In case of a breakdown at Arlington the stations at Newport, New York, Norfolk and Charleston are directed to send the noon signals. In case of appreciable error in the signal it is corrected by sending the signal one hour later.

"While the lag—that is, the difference of time between the transmission of the signal and its arrival at a distant point—is small, it amounts sometimes to some 0.3 second, and in these days, when the signals are being increasingly used by surveyors and astronomers, it is very desirable that more accurate sending apparatus be installed and certain return signals arranged for, particularly by radio, in order that the exact time of the receipt of signals may be known and published. This will require a special apparatus. Small radio receiving sets for the time signals are now being used extensively throughout the country by watchmakers, jewelers and colleges."

TO AID RECRUITING.

London Publishers to Curtail the Football News.

The London newspaper proprietors have agreed that nothing beyond the results of the football matches shall be published in any of the London morning and evening papers. This agreement does not affect the sporting papers or the Sunday papers. There has been a tremendous agitation against the continuance of the professional football which, it is charged, distracts attention from the war and is interfering with recruiting.

There are 7,000 professional players, while nearly 250,000 watched the league contests on a recent Saturday. It is probable that the remainder of the football schedule will be abandoned, or at least greatly curtailed.

THE HEAVENS IN DECEMBER.

Saturn Reaches Its Highest Position Among the Stars This Month.

Sun at Greatest Distance Below Celestial Equator the Twenty Second, When Winter Begins.

[Professor Doolittle of the University of Pennsylvania.]

December, the first of the winter months, is signalized by the entrance of the magnificent dog star, Sirius, into the evening sky. This beautiful, bluish star, the brightest star of the entire heavens, will be seen just emerging from the ground in the southeast to remain shining brightly in the southern sky throughout the winter months, until it finally withdraws toward the end of March.

The wonderful apparent brightness of this star is largely due to its nearness to us, for it is by no means the largest or the brightest of the stars. It is, in fact, but three times as massive as our own sun, though it is 23 times as bright; revolving around it in a period of 50 years is a dull but equally massive companion which emits but one twelve-thousandth part as much light as the brighter star of the pair. Just as Dean Swift imagined and described the two inner moons of Mars long before they were actually discovered, so Voltaire, in 1752, in his imitation of Gulliver's Travels, spoke of a great satellite revolving about Sirius on which his hero lived. The companion was actually discovered mathematically in 1884, and was first seen with the telescope in 1862.

Above Sirius the brilliant Orion hangs high in the southeast, within whose borders are the wonderful nebula and clouds of stars at C, Figure 1, and the red star at E. These objects will well repay observation with a small telescope. Above and to the left of Orion, the Twins, the bright Capella, the Bull and the Lesser Dog Star (at F) now make the eastern heavens a most brilliant sight. Below the Twins there this month enters the evening heavens the very faint group, Cancer, of which the curious star cluster (at G) is an interesting object in a small telescope. This small cloud of stars, known as the Praesaepe, or Beehive, is easily visible to the naked eye as a faint patch of nebulous light, while in the telescope it is seen to be composed of about 150 stars. It is thus an inferior cluster when compared to some others in which the stars are numbered by tens of thousands, its more conspicuous appearance doubtless arising from its nearness to us.

The bright planet Saturn, which now shines out with its golden radiance three times as brightly as a first-magnitude star, adds also to the brilliance of the eastern heavens. It is now between Gemini and Taurus, in almost the exact centre of the Milky Way, and it will remain in this part of the heavens for a long time. But, December 1, 1915, it will have moved only to the position S, Figure 1, in the extreme eastern border of the Milky Way, and by this time its southern motion among the stars will have become distinctly noticeable.

This beautiful world is now in more favorable position for observation than it will be again for nearly 30 years. For during this month it not only reaches its highest position among the stars but the sun also reaches at this time its greatest distance below the equator and so shines most directly on the rings of the planet, which are therefore seen by us brightly illuminated and widely opened out.

Both the earth and the sun are now so far below the plane of the rings that these present the appearance shown in Figure 2. As Saturn moves slowly eastward along the path AVB, Figure 1, it will also move southward among the stars and we will view the rings more and more obliquely. By the year 1922 the planet will have moved down so far that we will be looking at the rings exactly edgewise and they will then present the appearance shown in Figure 3. Finally, by the year 1929, the ringed planet will have reached its lowest position among the stars, below and to the right of the point A, Figure 1, and it will then rise far toward the south and remain low in the sky, even when crossing the meridian.

A glass of two or three inches aperture will show the rings clearly, but the larger the telescope that can be used the more perfectly is the beauty of this wonderful system brought out. In a moderately large glass it is clearly seen that the rings are made up of three, as lettered in Figure 2; the wide ring, B, is distinctly the brightest and is separated from A by a distinct, wide, vacant space. A similar, but much finer, lines divides the outer ring B into two parts. But most interesting of all is the dusky ring, C, which borders the inside of B and through which the outline of the ball of the planet is clearly seen.

A most interesting observation was made several years ago when Japetus, the eighth satellite of Saturn, happened to be eclipsed by this system. Neither Saturn nor its rings shine by their own light; they look bright only because they are illuminated by the light of the sun, and therefore they cast a shadow in space. As the satellite entered the shadow of the inner edge of the dusky ring it grew steadily fainter, until, when it entered the shadow of the bright ring B, it completely disappeared. Evidently the ring B is more opaque than either C or A.

It is now definitely known that the rings are a great flattened swarm of little particles, each one of which revolves around Saturn as a separate little moon. Those on the inner edge of the dusky ring make the circuit in 5 hours 50 minutes, while those on the outer edge of A, on account of their greater distance from the planet, require 12 hours 5 minutes for a single revolution.

Thus the ring by no means turns as a solid mass round Saturn, and it can, in fact, be shown mathematically that it would be impossible for it to do so. No known substance could stand one-hundredth part of the strain to which such a solid, turning ring would be subjected without being torn in pieces. The particles of the dusky ring are much more scattered than those of the ring A, while those of the wide middle swarm are the most closely packed of all.

To an observer on Saturn, could an observer exist there, the rings would appear by far the most wonderful objects in the sky. Were he on the equator of the planet he would see them only as a bright, narrow line, spanning the heavens from the east to the west, for there he would view them exactly edgewise. But were he to journey northward, he would see them apparently widen until they formed a most brilliant band across the sky. The apex of this wonderful arch would sink lower in the heavens as he pressed on, until, when he reached a latitude of 63 degrees north of Saturn's equator, the uppermost edge of A would sink below the south horizon and he would lose sight of the rings altogether.

But this beautiful arch would only be seen by him while the sun was shining on the north side of the rings. During one-half of the long Saturnian year, which is nearly 30 times as long as ours, the dark sides only of the myriads of particles would be turned toward him. The rings would then be recognized merely as an opaque band, hiding from his view a large part of the heavens. Indeed, from the intensity of the shadow which the rings are seen by us to cast upon the ball of the planet, it seems probable that they are sufficiently opaque to obscure the light of the sun itself. If this is so, then the imaginary inhabitant while in certain latitudes would be subjected to a total eclipse of the sun, which would continue without intermission for more than five years.

Saturn has 10 satellites, of which the positions of the inner 7, as seen in an inverting telescope, are shown in Figure 4. The largest one, Titan, is visible in a small telescope; Japetus, Rhea and Tethys require a somewhat larger glass, while the two faintest ones recently discovered by photograph can only be seen in the largest telescopes in existence. Distinct shadings can now be seen on the planet, but these are continually changing their positions as this distant world turns completely on its axis in the short time of only 9 hours 55 minutes.

Mercury, on which unusual interest has centered on account of its interesting transit across the sun on the morning of November 7, will not be well visible during the present month. It reached its greatest distance west of the sun November 23, and could then be easily seen low in the dawn, but is again drawing near the sun and will pass to the east of that body January 5. It will then have entered the evening sky, but as it will not attain its greatest distance from the sun until February 5 it will remain also in unfavorable position during the whole of January. February 2 it will again enter the morning sky.

Neither January 5 nor February 2, when Mercury passes the sun, will we again see a transit of this planet. Could we see the planet at the instant of conjunction January 5, we would see it passing nearly two degrees below the sun, which would then lie between the earth and the planet. February 21 the planet passes between the earth and the sun, but the inclination of its orbit is so great that it would then be seen to pass nearly four degrees above the sun. There will not occur another transit of the planet until May 7, 1924.

Venus is now in the morning sky, having passed to the west of the sun November 27. Toward the end of the month it may be seen shining brightly in the morning sky for two or three hours before sunrise, and it is then a beautiful and conspicuous object. It reaches its greatest brilliance January 2.

Mars is lost in the sun's rays throughout the month; it becomes a morning star December 24.

Jupiter shines brightly in the southwest, where it is moving slowly eastward through the constellation Aquarius. By December 1, 1915, it will have reached the point J, Figure 1, and after this for several years it will mount much higher in the sky than it has done during the six years that have just passed.

Saturn is in the western borders of Gemini; Uranus is a short distance west of Jupiter in Aquarius, and the faint Neptune is now in the evening sky between Gemini and Cancer.

December 1 the moon will pass over the Pleiades, but as this interesting phenomenon will occur at 3 p. m., it will not be visible to us. December 28 at 11 p. m. it will again pass the Pleiades, but as seen by us our satellite will move a little to the north of these stars and will so not hide them from view. December 20, at 8 hours 33 minutes p. m., the crescent moon will be seen to pass close to the planet Jupiter, the upper edge of the moon passing a short distance below the planet. Many observers south of the earth's equator will see the planet hidden at this time. December 5 at about 11:30 p. m. our satellite will pass over the bright star at H, Figure 1, and hide this star from view.

The sun will reach its greatest distance below the celestial equator December 22 at 11 hours 23 minutes a. m. (eastern standard time). This will, therefore, be the shortest day of the present year, and at this instant winter will begin.

ANTIS WARN WILSON.

Equal Suffrage Opposed by More Than Twenty Million Women.

Charging that suffragists hope to sweep aside popular majorities against the vote by national legislation, the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage has warned President Wilson that for the eighth time he will be asked to lend his influence toward the Congressional enactment of amendments to the constitution that would take from states the deciding power. In her letter to the President, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, head of the anti's, "in the name of more than 20,000,000 mature women in America who are not suffragists," submits the following:

"After 65 years of constant agitation and recruiting on the part of the suffragists, their national membership, estimated on representation of 53 suffrage organizations, certified to by their credentials committee at their recent national convention at Nashville, is under 200,000 for the entire United States, or less than one per cent of the 24,555,754 mature women in America.

"None of the four oldest states, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and Idaho, was interested enough to represent itself by delegation at the national suffrage convention.

"The defeats at the recent elections on woman suffrage were strikingly in proportion to the preponderance of women in the population and to the proportion of married men who were directly influenced by their wives in voting on this question.

"The great popular majorities against woman suffrage in the last three years have been, in the case of single states (Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio and Missouri), double, triple and quadruple the total majorities by which suffrage was established in five states—California, Washington, Kansas, Arizona and Oregon, where the total pluralities aggregated only 44,000.

"The defeats of woman suffrage at second elections, where the most popular education on the subject was present, have been so decisive as to demonstrate a constantly growing opposition to 'votes for women' in proportion to the increase of public enlightenment as to the radical tendencies and revolutionary alliances of its advocates. Michigan defeated suffrage in 1912 by 769 votes, in 1913 by 96,112; Ohio defeated suffrage in 1912 by 87,000, in 1914 by 182,000."

AMERICANS NEED PASSPORTS.

Americans intending to visit belligerent countries should provide themselves with passports, the State Department advises in an official statement. Ambassador Page at London has notified the department that "every steamer arriving from the United States brings many persons claiming American citizenship who are not provided with passports. As the British regulations now require persons entering British territory to bear passports, complications necessarily arise. Moreover, the persons mentioned, when they apply to the ambassador at London for passports, usually experience difficulty in identifying themselves and presenting satisfactory evidence of citizenship."

CHIPPEWA TERRITORY DRY.

The last of the 200 saloons operating in the district covered by the Chippewa Indian treaty of 1855, which last June was held effective by the United States Supreme Court, has closed. The territory which now becomes dry covers a portion of northern and central Minnesota larger than three New England states.

REQUEST FOR ARCHITECT GRANTED.

like going into that matter without learning from the School Committee what it desired in this line, and had agreed to wait until informed. With regard to the storm sash, the fitting was in the contract and the building committee was holding back certain money until the contract is completed, but was informed by the architect that the sash was fitted, as to the putting of them in place, that was not in the contract. Regarding the wiring for room telephones, bells and clocks, the committee had not planned to do this because it did not know how far the appropriation would go. Since it was not authorized by the Board of Aldermen they did not consider that they had the right to go ahead, now that they found that they had the funds, without a vote of the board. The board will now await information from the School Committee.

All business before the board being transacted, the body adjourned and gave attention to the election. During the session the officials of the smaller precincts had been coming in with the returns, and from the figures recorded on the city clerk's books the members began to figure out the probability of their election or defeat.

RHEIMS BEING DESTROYED.

One Thousand Civilians Killed and the Cathedral Nearly Ruined.

[Cable to New York Tribune.]

Rheims, an open town from the military point of view, is being daily reduced to a heap of smoking ruins. 300 shells were hurled into the town. Fifteen persons—nine women and children and six men, two of them soldiers on guard at the gates—were killed and more than 20 wounded. Since Monday last more than 100 civilians have been killed, bringing the list of civilian dead up to more than 1,000 since the beginning of the bombardment, 69 days ago.

In the last 48 hours more than 50 houses have been destroyed, mostly by bombs and incendiaries—that is to say, by projectiles filled with petrol, which spread flames wherever they burst. The local narrow gauge railway line is now chiefly used to bring back the last of the 10,000 refugees, all that remain of the 120,000 people who four months ago inhabited the capital of the province of Champagne.

If the present bombardment continues for another week with the present intensity Rheims will be a second Moscow. All that is left of the fire brigade is quite unable to cope with the succession of fires which burst out all over the city wherever the shells fall. Since Monday the cathedral has been repeatedly struck by shells from the heavy guns of the forts of Nogent, l'Abbesse and Hedin. The inhabitants of Rheims are convinced that before the Germans abandon their present positions all that now remains of the cathedral will be reduced to a mere heap of ruins.

ON DUTY NIGHT AND DAY.

Two Watchmen, Detailed to See That Not a Person Enters or Leaves.

Cattle Disease Spreads to Frank Levers Farm and Strict Quarantine Ordered.

The foot and mouth disease on the island has spread to Frank Levers's farm, after having been supposedly stamped out by the federal authorities. Seven cattle and some swine compose the property of Levers, and it is said that most of these are affected by the disease. Undoubtedly the location of the farm had something to do with it, as it is just a little north of that owned by Antone DeCosta, on whose place the disease first appeared.

When the new infection was reported to Commissioner I. Lincoln Sherman Tuesday afternoon he immediately ordered a quarantine of the cattle, and the agents who are fighting the disease were immediately summoned. Their conclusions were that the disease had spread from DeCosta's farm as a result of too lax vigilance. To guard against further danger of this sort two watchmen have been detailed to keep constant survey on the farm, and to see that not a single person leaves or enters it within the time the quarantine is on.

The watchmen are on duty every hour of the 24, one working through the night and the other during the day, and have instructions to prosecute every individual who attempts to leave or enter the grounds. This order is in marked contrast to that which prevailed in the DeCosta case, when all who desired were allowed to come and go and DeCosta could truck anything he desired. The federal agents blame this lax system for the spreading of the disease, and have determined that no more risks of this sort shall be run.

Kingfishers Lead Pan-Athletic Events, Vincent Wood Heads Employed Boys.

The grammar school boys had their innings in the Pan-Athletic League events, postponed from last Saturday, Tuesday afternoon at the Young Men's Christian Association, and the employed boys also had their regular share of the sports. The Pan-Athletic League was confined to a gymnastic carnival, which counted for points, while the employed boys had an athletic meet of four events, Harvard winning with 10 points, Dartmouth finishing second with 7, Yale next with 5, Brown fourth with 3, while Princeton had but 1.

The Kingfishers in the Pan-Athletic League took the opportunity to increase their slight lead over the Sparrows, and the standing of the teams now shows them first with 40 points, while the Sparrows have 34. The Condors are third with 26, followed by the Eagles with 20, while the Bobolinks are flying fourth with 16, and the Redstarts last with 13.

Vincent Wood of the Harvard team in the Employed Boys' League had the best record for the broad jump with 7 feet, 5 inches. Bloomfield of Dartmouth covered the 50-yard dash in 8 3-5 seconds; Jestings of Yale did 10 feet in the rope climb, and Allan of Dartmouth took first place in the pull-ups with 15 to his credit.

In the gymnastic events in the Pan-Athletic League were dumbbell drills rope climbs, standing high jump, spring board and mat work, horizontal bar, and work on the horse. The Kingfishers tallied 7 points, the Condors 6, the Sparrows and Eagles 4 each, while the Redstarts secured 2 and the Bobolinks 1.

FOR STRAY CATS.

An Appeal in the Interest of Much Needed Branch of Humane Work.

To the Editor of the News:

The purpose of the Newport County Cat Club has been brought to the notice of the public frequently through the press since its organization last January. We feel well rewarded for our efforts in the way people have responded to our many appeals for the homeless cats. Where we had a large number on the waiting list, we are now receiving calls from local business houses to send them several good mousers at once. Every one knows the store cat has many friends and is well fed. Our Humane fund started with a donation of $2 by one of Newport's kind-hearted ladies. There have been several small donations since, but most of the money has been made from placing cats in homes, and the fee of 25 cents asked for delivery where the people are able to pay. The club having no building for boarding or housing, the cats are fixed, and called for as soon as they can be placed. We advertise and wait for results, which always come. By this method we have been able to do a lot of work in this line, with small capital.

It is a most pitiful sight to visit the summer cottage places all over the county, and see the number of cats recently left to starve this winter. There is a big field to work in and few real workers. It is hoped that this article may be read by many people living in the vicinity mentioned. Will some one who is interested report such stray cats, and thereby help our club and this much needed branch of humane work? Address Mrs. F. E. Hughes, Melville, R. I., phone 2515-Y-2.

There is to be an oyster supper and dance on the night of December 8 at the Holy Cross guild house in Middletown for the benefit of this club. Something is done each month in the way of whist, suppers, etc., to enlarge the club fund, with which we intend to stimulate public interest by holding a cat show at the beach next summer. By encouraging better breeding the cat will naturally receive more attention, whether long-haired or short, and be considered a valuable asset to the family.

BURLINGAME BEATS BOYLE.

No Change in the Board of Aldermen and Only One in the School Committee.

W. R. Harvey Replaces Miss Hunter—Fire Department Re-organization Has Big Majority.

In the largest vote ever cast in a municipal election in Newport, Robert S. Burlingame was Tuesday chosen mayor of the city for the coming year by a plurality of 153 over Patrick J. Boyle, in a total recorded vote of 4569. In November 1540 ballots were cast in Newport for the gubernatorial candidates and 4574 for the Congressional nominees. Practically everybody at all voted for one or the other candidate for mayor. The figures of the supervisors showed that 4581 ballots were given out, and of these only 12 are not counted in the vote for mayor. The total was 352 larger than was recorded in the city election a year ago, and both candidates gained over the figures of 1913. Boyle gained 113, and 303 more votes were polled for Burlingame than for MacLeod in 1913. The increased vote in a year when there is a general election accounts largely for the greater total.

Boyle gained in every voting precinct with two exceptions, and in these he had the same number as in 1913. Burlingame gained in every precinct, and also made a net gain over Boyle in every voting district. Burlingame and Boyle each had a plurality in five districts, the former carrying the First, Second and Third wards, and the latter the Fourth and Fifth.

The present aldermen—Messrs. Hanley, Kirby, Hughes, Leddy and Kelly—were re-elected, the first four by large pluralities and the last-named by a safe but smaller margin.

The result for School Committee, on the face of the returns, is the re-election of Dr. B. E. Darrah, Rev. E. H. Porter, D. D., and Charles F. Gifford, and the election of William R. Harvey. The vote for fourth place is very close between Mr. Gifford and Rev. Father Reddy, the former having but one more vote than the latter. Much to the regret of a large number of the residents of Newport, Miss Anna F. Hunter was not returned.

The choice for Representative Council retains many of the present members and brings into public life many new men. In the First Ward delegation there are 6 present and 7 new members. The Second ward returns 10 present members, including the vacancies filled, and 5 new men. The Third ward elects 12 present members, including one who comes from the First ward, and 1 new man. The Fourth ward re-elects 7 present members and 6 new men, two of whom have been in former Councils. The Fifth ward sends back 8 of the present members and elects 5 new men.

The proposition for the re-organization of the fire department was approved by a plurality of 522 in a total of 3,264 votes of the taxpayers. It was approved by every ward except the Fifth, and in every voting precinct except the two in that ward.

The following is the vote in the city, a star after the name of a candidate for the Council indicating re-election, and only the first 13 being chosen.
